P.K. PAGE

READING FROM HER NEW BOOK

THE HIDDEN ROOM: COLLECTED POEMS

(Published by Porcupine's Quill, September 1997)

P.K. Page, Canada's foremost living poet, is returning to Montreal where her writing career began. In the early 1940s she was associated with F. R. Scott and the Montreal group who launched the modernist journal Preview. P.K. Page won the Governor General's Award for poetry in 1954. She is also a gifted painter, who is represented in the National Gallery of Canada. P.K. Page has published seven collections of poetry, notably As Ten as Twenty (1946), Cry Ararat! (1967) and The Glass Air (1991), and a fascinating account of her life as an ambassador's wife, Brazilian Journal (1987). In 1997 she was the subject of a special issue of The Malahat Review.
